Short paragraphs under each topic with simple, encouraging explanations:

1. How to Meal Prep for Beginners

Meal prepping doesn't have to be complicated. Start by choosing one or two simple recipes you like and make them in larger batches. Divide the food into containers so you can grab a meal quickly throughout the week. This helps save time, reduces stress, and keeps you from choosing unhealthy options when you're rushed. As you get more comfortable, you can prep more items or try new recipes.

2. Healthy Ingredient Swaps

You can make almost any meal healthier just by swapping a few ingredients. Try Greek yogurt instead of sour cream, whole-wheat tortillas instead of white tortillas, or honey instead of refined sugar. These swaps keep meals flavorful while adding more nutrients and reducing unnecessary calories. Small changes like these can make a big difference in your daily eating habits.

3. Budget-Friendly Grocery Tips

Eating healthy doesn't have to be expensive. Shop for fresh fruits and vegetables that are in season, or buy frozen produce, which is just as nutritious and often cheaper. Buying store brands and planning meals around weekly sales can also save a lot of money. With a little planning, you can create healthy meals that fit your budget and your lifestyle.
